

The Ideal Eyeglass

Perfectly adjusted frames and bridges, lenses without rims, form, in our opinion, the ideal eyeglass for general use.

They afford a free field of vision, and are so light and comfortable that one is scarcely conscious of having them on.

The selection of the correct frame and properly shaped lenses for each individual wearer is a special feature of Almer Coe Eyeglass Service.

We have, of course, all good styles in rimmed glasses for special uses.

WASHINGTON HAS WARM WELCOME FOR JAP ENVOYS

Delegates to Arms Parley Arrive in Capital.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—The international conference for limitation of armaments and discussion of Pacific and far eastern questions entered today the final phase of construction with the arrival here of a contingent of Japanese official participants, the first delegation from the invited governments to reach the capital. The visitors were received by government officials and were cheered vociferously by thousands of spectators who lined the streets.

Maj. Gen. K. Tanaka, heading the military advisory staff, in a statement formally expressed wishes for the success of the noble task initiated by President Harding with the object of relieving all the nations from the miseries of war and from the heavy expenditure incidental to the rivalry of armaments among the various nations, as well as from the desire that the millions who fell in the Armageddon have not died in vain.

WASHINGTON NEWS — IN BRIEF —

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 23.—President Harding is confident the American people will rally to the support of the railway labor board if the brotherhoods persist in striking in defiance of the award. The President may appeal to the people to uphold the authority of the new agency designed to end the derangement of transportation by strikes.

REFORM PROMISED AT ELLIS ISLAND; NEW COMMISSIONER

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—New policies in administration of Ellis Island will be put in effect, the department of labor announced today, in connection with the installation of Robert E. Tod as commissioner of immigration for the port of New York. A committee of investigation has been at work for some weeks, it was revealed, examining the arrangements and personnel at the station, and has made a number of approved recommendations for alterations which are expected to expedite the movement of immigrants through the station, improve provisions for their comfort and welfare, and increase facilities.

The changing of commissioners at New York and Boston, the announcement said, "organization of committees for investigation, and prompt demands for resignations from all officials found to be incompetent, discourteous, or otherwise unfitted for the service, are but a part of a plan for a general revision where necessary of the immigration service in all parts of the United States."

"The secretary of labor announced that it was his purpose to make of the immigration service not merely a service to examine and enforce immigration laws, but through it to extend a welcome to the hundreds of thousands coming to our shores."

New York City or nearby, are expecting them, but they did not have the money to send a wireless from the boat, and no one had told them they could have sent a wire from the dock. So they have been trying to get word to the relatives now, but have been hidden use of telephone or telegraph.

As they explain the situation to me and beg me to get in touch with their relatives the chief inspector comes up to order me "not to butt in with the United States government."

TOMORROW—I am thrown out of Ellis Island.

Shouts 'Help!' So Loud He's Heard in Another State
TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 23.—[Special.]—The shouts for help of John Loveless, a farm hand, when he fell into the Delaware river from a seventeen foot wall in South Trenton late last night, were so loud they brought aid from the adjoining state of Pennsylvania.

Forbidden to Help Companions.
As I am leaving some one calls me in a frightened voice. I turn and see, in a corner behind an iron fence, a group of Irish girls, my friends from the ship. They are crying. Timidly and hysterically they beckon me over. All their credentials checked, their medical tests passed, their cards O. K.'d, they have nevertheless been handed the much feared white cards reading "T. D." (temporary detention). Relatives in every case, living in Herded Back to the Island.

All afternoon we sit there, waiting, but no inspector. At 4 work is over for the day and those of us who have not been inspected are returned to the ship, on the same dirty tender on which we came over.

Nobody wants us back on the ship. We see a dismal crowd. The next day, Wednesday, is a holiday at the island, so we remain on the boat. Thursday morning we find that immigrants from a recently arrived ship have received priority. By noon, however, we proceed again to the island. Again the wait, again the coffee and sandwiches, again the uncertainty. Our inspector is an insignificant looking man, but capable of terrifying us all. A boy and girl from Poland are in front of me. Their credentials he finds satisfactory; everything seems in order. But I hear him say to the man at the next desk, "I guess I'll keep these kids here for a few days" and the boy and girl are hurried over to the T. D. (temporary detention) room.

Taunt Disappointed Ones.
All the inspectors seem to regard it as a great joke, this detention of people for trivial or inadequate reasons. Proud, sarcastic taunts are hurled at the immigrants. Their confused or pitiable replies are bandied about from official to official in a way that is far from dignified.

By virtue of his authority we have to answer any intimate question which our inspector may choose to ask us; it

THE ANSWERS, ANY, THE RULE AT ELLIS ISLAND

Effort to Cheer Way of Immigrants.

The following article is the fourth of a series by Miss Genevieve Forbes, a member of the Tribune staff, who has just returned from America, passing through Ellis Island as an Irish immigrant girl:

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

As we climb the stairs we catch glimpses of cages and bars. Self-important officials, holding their jobs because there is an Ellis Island, yell and scold at us because we are at Ellis Island. The noise is deafening; the indignation incessant.

At last we are shoved into a large room with rows of benches, each numbered with a different number and accommodating about 100. At the end of each bench is a raised platform and a desk before which an inspector is supposed to sit.

A group of burly men at the door act as a guard. They push us in and boom a number. Unfortunately the persons who, bewildered or unable to understand, goes into the room with no reference to us are assigned with no reference to us. In fact the numbers seem to take delight in sending one girl to bench No. 2, and her sister to bench No. 9.

American Flags Profuse.
Women are looking for their husbands, men for their families, even little children have been separated from their parents. I sit next to five children, the oldest 10, from Poland. On the confusion they have lost their mother and are crying.

"Step in front of them kids," an official yells us; "their mother is in another room and the Lord knows when she'll get here," and he pushes the youngsters to the end of the line.

"We have no idea who we are, what we have to do. Above us is a balcony profusely draped with American flags. Underneath the flags groups of petty officials, many of them foreign, loiter in smoking chairs, smoking and reading newspapers. Occasionally they yell at us in order to a more subordinate official who takes it out on some of us.

Civil Inquiries Ignored.
Office girls pass up and down the balcony. They giggle down at us, sometimes they stop and point at us, in a street companion's attention.

It is noon. Men pass up and down the aisles and give us a paper cup full of coffee and two cheese sandwiches.

Some of the women want to take their children to the washroom, but they are not allowed to do so.

At last inspectors come in and take their places in front of most of the benches. There is no inspector for our row. We wait and wait, but nobody cares much, for the most of us can't speak English and can't make much trouble.

Conspicuously and timidly I ask seven different men in uniform what we're going to do and when we're going to be let in. Six disregard me entirely; the seventh snarls, "What's it to you?"
